

Obturator Nerve Program Transcript

This is a diagram showing the distribution of the obturator nerve. The obturator nerve arises from spinal nerves L2, L3, and L4. It travels down through the pelvis, through the obturator foramen of the pubic bone, and then enters the medial aspect of the thigh. There it gives off motor branches to the adductors of the hip, as well as sensory branches to the medial aspect of thigh.