

How to Check for Permissions through the Annual Copyright License

When you want to share, copy, or distribute copyrighted work with students or other employees, do the following to ensure we have copyright permissions for that use:

1. Go to RightFind Academic: <https://rightfind.copyright.com/rs-ui-web/welcome>;
2. Create a new account using your USA email address, OR log in with your existing account;
3. In the search box on the main page type in the title of the journal/book or the ISSN/ISBN;
4. In the results list, look at the box to the right of the title you need that says “How can I use this copyrighted content?”:

- a A green check mark means you are covered and free to share/copy/distribute digitally or in paper form (depending on what the check mark indicates);
- b A circle with an exclamation mark means you are covered, but there are additional terms with which you must comply. Click “TERMS” for the specifics;
- c A red circle with a line through it means this work is not covered under the license. Check the alternatives listed in the second question on the “For Employees” section of the library’s copyright information page.

Questions? Please check <https://library.usa.edu/copyright> or contact library@usa.edu